LOCAL PERSPECTIVE

Electric cooperatives are ready to work with elected officials

BY KEVIN WHEELER

As the nation prepares to welcome a new administration and Congress, America's electric cooperatives are ready to welcome back old friends and introduce ourselves to newcomers.

The co-ops' message to elected officials, both old and new, Republican and Democrat, will be the same: We all need to work together to protect consumer access to safe, reliable and affordable electric service. We have reason to believe this message will be well received. After all, co-ops speak for more than 42 million electric consumers, a sizeable constituency by any measure.

Whatever you thought of the 2016 campaign, one message came through loud and clear: many people don't believe their concerns are being heard. For cooperatives, listening to people is at the heart of our business model – and we carry our members' concerns to public officials every day.

As co-ops reach out to engage with elected officials, they will build on the strength of Co-ops Vote, the grassroots initiative to reverse declining voter turnout in rural areas. Co-ops Vote did more than register voters. This initiative sent a strong message to the country's elected officials that rural electric consumers matter.

Co-ops will be reinforcing this message with a request that policymakers keep the needs of consumers front and center. Needs such as funding for infrastructure, especially transmission lines and access to natural gas. Increasing the efficiency of the electric system. Determining the future of hydropower and nuclear energy. Elected officials will be making decisions affecting every aspect of the electric system.

Advocating for these issues is nothing new. In fact, we've been doing it for years. And we're ready to continue the fight on your behalf, reaching out to all elected officials, new and returning.

Here at Access Energy Cooperative, we will be reaching out to local, state and federal officials. In initial conversations we will be explaining the unique member-owned, not-for-profit co-op business model. And we will be reminding longtime politicians of our co-op's commitment to its members.

In Washington, D.C., our national trade association, the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, will be conducting similar introductions, speaking with key agencies and departments within the new administration. It is likely many of these new policymakers will know little or nothing of the co-op model.

Forging an energy future that serves rural consumers – and protecting access to safe, reliable and affordable electric power – will be a bipartisan effort. Electric co-ops are optimistic. As we work with our elected leaders, we hope to renew a spirit of cooperation in the nation's capital and in statehouses across the country.

After all, cooperation is what co-ops do best! ⚡

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Iowa Fertilizer Company honored with Iowa Venture Award: Outstanding Business of the Year

On behalf of Iowa's rural electric cooperatives, The Iowa Area Development Group (IADG), last month recognized seven distinguished Iowa companies with an Iowa Venture Award at a luncheon held in conjunction with the Iowa Association of Electric Cooperatives' annual meeting at the Sheraton West Des Moines.

Nominated by Access Energy Cooperative, Iowa Fertilizer in rural Lee County near Wever received the 2016 Outstanding Business of the Year Iowa Venture Award. The company is historic in many ways, including being the state's largest single-site construction project, spanning 500 acres, and having a capital investment of $2 billion. This is the first greenfield nitrogen fertilizer facility constructed in the United States in 30 years, and the plant is expected to deliver 1.5 to 2 million metric tons of fertilizer products annually to farmers in Iowa and the Midwest. During construction, 3,000 workers were employed, and the project created more than 700 ancillary jobs in the area. More than 200 permanent employees will work at the facility, creating a lasting, positive impact on the region.

"The Iowa Venture Awards luncheon provides a forum to celebrate the courage, contribution, innovation, responsibility and vision of Iowa entrepreneurs," said IADG president Rand Fisher. "IADG, on behalf of our sponsors, is proud to recognize these seven outstanding companies for their contribution to their community, region and state."

The six additional businesses recognized with an Iowa Venture Award for their significant contributions in diversifying and strengthening Iowa's economy were Bratney Companies of Marshalltown; Christensen Farms & Feedlots, Inc., in Payton; Concrete Machinery Inc. of Iowa in Paton; Great Lakes Communication Corp. of Spencer; Maassen Dairy Farms of Maurice; and Mogler Farms/Pig Hill West of Alford. Iowa Secretary of Agriculture and Land Stewardship Bill Northey assisted in presenting the awards and honoring the Iowa companies and their leaders. ⚡
